KA1 – Mobility of Youth Workers

Diving into diversity: Taking a look at personal bias in youth work.

Our societies are becoming more diverse, not to mention multifaceted. As youth workers, we are cautious at times about approaching diversity and incorporating minority groups into our communities and youth activities because we are unfamiliar with their culture and traditions.

Why?

Because of that, we have developed a training that would support youth workers' self-awareness and give them tools to understand their own biases, stereotypes and prejudices that keep them from involving and including all young people equally.

Objectives

The main aim of this training course is to increase youth worker's self-awareness and equip them with tools that would support their everyday work on creating a supportive and equal learning environment for young people

Objective 1

To offer participants an opportunity to reflect and discover their personal biases

Objective 2

To increase youth workers' self-awareness and adaptiveness while working with young people from diverse backgrounds

Objective 3

Develop participants' understanding of communities and media and how they are influencing our perception of selves and others

Objective 4

To give participants an opportunity to develop their design and facilitation skills by developing sessions that can later be transferred to local realities

Target Group

- Youth trainers/workers;
- People who are actively working with young people professionally or voluntarily;
- Participants that have a creative attitude!
- Aged 18+
